

Fellowship Farm

In neighborhoods, schools and in the public square, people are striving to communicate and find common ground to support families and communities. Since its founding in 1931, Fellowship Farm has embraced diversity and emphasized personal growth and tolerance for other ways of living and thinking. Fellowship Farm began as an idea. In fact, it was an idea so powerful that supporters sold their own homes so that the 120-acre Farm in Pottstown could be purchased. Today we are not asking you to sell your home but we are asking you to make a donation to support Fellowship Farm.

The work and mission of Fellowship Farm does not just happen, it requires help and support from all of us. Individual contributions help ensure students and families can benefit from opportunities offered at the Farm. Your gift helps change lives that have the power to transform families, schools and communities.

A donation from you will impact the four pillars of Fellowship Farm:

Mission – Fellowship Farm’s mission is to nurture in each person the vision and skills to foster the ways of peace and understanding in hearts, homes, communities and the world.

Site – Fellowship Farm, with its meadows, groves and winding paths, provides a unique learning environment that both engages and challenges and at the same time provides the sense of space and tranquility needed for personal reflection and growth.

Legacy – Fellowship Farm has its roots in the Fellowship House movement and was in the vanguard of the civil rights and fair housing movements in Philadelphia as well as in a supportive and organizing role in the South. In his autobiography, Stride Toward Freedom, Martin Luther King noted that it was at Fellowship House in Philadelphia where he first learned of Gandhi’s theory and practice on non-violence. In fact, Fellowship House and Farm organized Dr. King’s two trips to Philadelphia.

Programs – Fellowship Farm works on its own as well as with community partners to create custom designed education programs that offer the vision and skills to support the transformation of schools, workplaces and communities. There are offsite programs for businesses and as well as Family Camp and Upstander Not Bystander, an immersion, skills-based program to help students stand up to bullying, prejudice, abuse and violence.

The summer season brings We ask that you join us and make a tax deductible gift to Fellowship Farm today. Your gift will honor a mission and legacy and support the historic site and relevant and engaging programs that are Fellowship Farm.

Thank you for your support. Your gift will be gratefully received and wisely used.
